THE REAL ESTATE FIGURES.

Several well-posted real estate men have filed objections to The Herald's story regarding the increase in the value of business property. All have the same cause of complaint. It is that the figures we gave are under the mark, that many other instances of great increases in value could have been given. And we have been told that we should have taken up at the same time the question of residence property. Said a prominent dealer yesterday:

"I have no hesitation in saying that there is not a small residence in Salt Lake, bought within the last three years, that cannot be sold today for more than it cost, provided the purchaser paid a fair price for it. The value of residence property has increased steadily for three years, and I believe it will continue to increase." The matter will be taken up later by The Herald, and we are sure the facts will be as stated by the dealer quoted.

Real estate values are higher, business is better, in spite of the knickerbockers. And the way to keep things moving is to continue in office Mayor Richard P. Morris and the efficient gentlemen who are candidates with him on the Democratic ticket. We do not pretend that their election would bring about an unprecedented boom in Salt Lake, we do not claim that if they are continued in office real estate prices will soar tremendously. We do assert, though, that a continuation of the present administration will mean a continuance of the healthy, steady progress the city is now enjoying.

We do not believe the election of the "American" ticket will mean anything of the sort. We leave the Republican ticket entirely out of the consideration for nobody seriously believes the Republicans will be better than a poor third this year. The contest lies between the Democrats and the "Americans."

Many promises have been made by the "Americans" and their organ regarding the great things that will follow the election of their ticket. So far, however, they have failed to point out how their promises are to be fulfilled. They object to the only feasible plan for giving the city water that has yet been prepared, but they offer no substitute. They pretend that a great influx of population will begin the moment the success of the "American" ticket is known, that they don't say where the population is coming from.

We are told that outside capital will be invested here, that the city will prosper as never before. How? Why? Will outside capital be invested on a fabric of promises? Are investors living outside of Salt Lake such fools that they will back with their money a man who has a miserable failure as mayor as against one who can point to a record of honorable achievement? We hardly think so.

The truth is that the only way to continue the admitted prosperity of Salt Lake City, the only way to assure our outside friends that our progress is to be sane and safe, is to elect this Democratic nominee.

MUST PAY THE DUTY.

The treasury department has been considerably exercised recently, accordingly to the dispatches, over the homecoming of Miss Alice Roosevelt with something like $100,000 worth of presents she has accumulated on her oriental tour. Finally Secretary Shaw went to the president about the matter and asked him whether or not Miss Roosevelt should be required to pay duty, amounting to about $60,000, on her collection.

The president replied that his daughter must be treated exactly as the daughter of any citizen would be treated; that she must pay full duty on any dutiable articles she brought home with her. As Mr. Roosevelt is not a rich man, the cost of his daughter's trip to the orient will fall heavily on him. And yet there was no lawful method of avoiding the outlay, although we wish there were.

This is not an ordinary case. Miss Roosevelt was accorded high honors and given costly presents in the countries she visited, not because she was Miss Alice Roosevelt, but because she was the daughter of the president of the United States. It seems a pity that she, or her father for her, should be compelled to part with a fortune for things she did not want and for which she will never have any use. It may be said that, in spite of the fact that the presents were official in their character, Miss Roosevelt personally will retain them after her father retires from office and that therefore there is no excuse for remitting the duty.

There is justice in this argument, but the fact remains that the duty in this instance is most burdensome and that nobody would be seriously hurt if the presents could be brought in without duty. As this cannot be done under the law the next best thing would be for some Democratic member of congress to offer a bill providing for the return of the money paid out in duties on the presents. It is reasonably certain that such a bill would go through, and it would not constitute a dangerous precedent, either.

A DESERVED HONOR.

Clem Schramm's thousands of friends in Utah and other western states will rejoice with him in the fact that he has been accorded the highest possible Masonic honor, the thirty-third degree. To the Masonic fraternity the news will give especial pleasure, for the Masons know Mr. Schramm's true value. Although young in years, he is old in Masonry. He has often been tried but never has he been found wanting, and on every necessary occasion he is willing to be tried again.

It is rarely that a high honor is as worthily bestowed as in this instance. Of his own free will and accord Mr. Schramm has devoted much of his valuable time to Masonic work. Never has he been too busy to respond to calls made upon him, and he has always gone about his tasks as cheerily as the ordinary man goes to his favorite recreation. Mr. Schramm is a credit to Masonry, and the reward that is his will be begrudged by none who know him.

NEW PENNSYLVANIA SCANDAL.

Poor old Pennsylvania is in the throes of another scandal. The state had $500,000 on deposit with the Enterprise National bank of Allegheny. Some $200,000 of this it has developed was loaned to politicians on paper that is practically worthless. Just why they left the odd $300,000 is not explained, and the only man who could explain, the cashier, is dead by the suicide route. The bank is insolvent and there may be some prosecutions, although you can't tell much about such matters in advance in Pennsylvania.

It is interesting to note that a delegate in congress, Mr. Andrews of New Mexico, is heavily indebted. Andrews, who was one of the late Senator Quay's chief lieutenants, and who repolished the sobriquet of "Bull," owes the bank upwards of $400,000. He borrowed the money, it appears, in order that he might finance a jerkwater railroad in New Mexico. And he does not seem to be in a position to make good.

All the rottenness in Pennsylvania Republican politics did not die with Quay. He left behind him some worthy successors.

CAPTAIN CARTER EMERGES.

If Captain Oberlin M. Carter knows when he is well off, he will go quietly back to the obscurity from which he has recently emerged. Carter, it will be remembered, aided Gaynor and Greene, contractors, in the theft of more than $500,000 from the government. He was convicted and sentenced to a term of five years in prison, which he served. Now he claims that his conviction was brought about by unfair methods, and that he is as innocent as any new-born babe.

It is rather late for Carter to enter such a plea in his own behalf. The most powerful influences were exerted at the time of his trial to save him. They failed. For him to come out now with a protest of innocence looks singularly like an effort to make capital for his co-conspirators who were brought back the other day to stand trial for their share in the crime. Captain Carter will gain nothing by his attitude, either for himself or for his indicted friends. If there is justice in Savannah, they will be convicted, Carter or no Carter.

A CURIOUS REQUEST.

Certain citizens of Texas, and they are described as good citizens, too, have joined in a petition to the governor practically asking him to legalize lynchings. They ask the executive to refrain from using the state troops for the purpose of protecting those guilty of criminal assault and to permit citizens to pursue such offenders and shoot them down without any form of trial or other legal inquiry. It is recognized that a law of this kind would not look well on the statute book, so it is suggested that the proposition can become a sort of unwritten law.

Governor Lanham, greatly to his credit, refused to consider the petition favorably. He said: "As a public official, bound by a sense of conscientious obligation, I must uphold the statutes and resist lawlessness in any form." He added that, as the executive officials of the state have taken an oath to enforce the laws of Texas and the constitution of the United States, "they cannot surrender the functions of courts and juries to the unbridled and arbitrary action of mob rule."

We cannot understand what the petitioners hoped to gain. Their pretense was that the tacit sanction of lynch law would have the effect of stopping a possible wholesale slaughter of negroes. It seems to us that exactly the opposite would be reached. Some men, even in Texas, are prevented from taking part in mobs by fear of punishment. With no such fear confronting them they would not only join mobs but they might use them to work out private revenge.

The law against lynching is a sound one and it should be enforced in every state. Texas cannot afford to take a backward step. The law does not put a stop to lynchings, but it certainly does afford officers a warrant for protecting prisoners, and it does keep down the number of mob murders.

OUR FLOUR IN CHINA.

The Daily Consular and Trade Reports of recent date contains an interesting article on American flour in China, prepared by Special Agent Burill of the state department who is making a study of trade conditions in the orient. Mr. Burill has found that in 1904 practically all the flour used in China was imported from the United States. He is not sanguine, though, about a continuation of American control of this market. He says:

"It is known that wheat can be grown in Manchuria comparing favorably with the best quality raised in the United States, and this, it is maintained, will lead to the erection and operation of flour mills which will be able to supply a good grade of flour at prices far below those at which the American flour can be sold. Not only will the cost of production be less, but the freight and insurance charges will be extremely low as compared with rates from the Pacific coast, and the cost of labor may be estimated at approximately 25 cents (Mexican) a day. With these advantages, the grinding of Manchurian wheat into flour by mills owned wholly or in part by the Chinese is merely a question of opportunity and capital, and that eventually the flour made in Chinese mills of Chinese wheat will control the market of northern China appears to be equally as well assured."

Again, even if the Manchurian wheat does not make as good flour as American wheat the Chinese will still buy it because it can be furnished them at a lower price. And, as Mr. Burill says, the price of an article of food is "the first consideration of a Chinaman," though the manufacturer cannot afford to wholly disregard the quality of his product, even in catering to the Chinese.

That there will always be a demand for high grade American flour in China is conceded by Mr. Burill, but he believes that, within the next few years, it will be confined to the 10,000 foreign residents of Shanghai and a few at other places. In view of the fact that a great deal of Utah flour is annually shipped to China this state is interested in the market. It is possible that Mr. Burill's view of the situation is too pessimistic and that as soon as the effects of the anti-American boycott die away the flour outlook may brighten.

The "American" organ says: "It is not fair that a man merely because he is the favorite of a few politicians of the 'church set' should be given not only priority and a 'clinch,' but that every one else is obliged to stay out of the race, being deprived even of the possibility of an accident whereby he might win." The owner of the organ thought differently only a few years ago. So did the candidate for mayor on the "American" ticket. So did about six-tenths of the people who are supporting that ticket.

A New York state senator denies that he was paid bribe money by the Mutual Life Insurance company. All the money he got was paid to him for acting as attorney for the company. However, we may be pardoned if we wonder whether or not he would have been employed as attorney if he had not been a state senator.

We sincerely hope the Democrats of Ogden elect their city ticket regardless of the fact that the victory might be taken by some people to indicate that there is no power in the press. And there should be no power in such a press as Ogden possesses.

Yes, Best Beloved, it is quite true that the Salt Lake Route would never have been built if the projectors had not known that some time there would be an "American" city ticket in the field here.

Sport: We don't know whether short hobbies are better for a pastor than long hobbies. Write to E. Thompson, candidate for mayor. He knows.

Now the Burlington is reported to be headed toward Salt Lake. Of course, though, it won't dream of coming unless the "American" ticket is elected.
